SMALL-POX prevails at Chicago.

MARY ANDERSON played to over $9,000 at Cincinnati last week.

There are too many criminal lawyers in the Legislature looking after the interests of their clients.—[Cynthia News.]

The Covington and Cincinnati bridge bill has passed the House but will not go back to the Senate again before it is ready for the Governor's signature.

AT Frankfort the Pneumo-pneumonia Bill has been defeated in the House by a vote of 27 to 42. A motion to reconsider will probably be made and the fight renewed with great vigor.

Is the Legislature a bill has passed the House appropriating $5,000 to complete the building for the education of the colored blind children of this State and $3,000 per year to sustain the institution.

By a vote of twenty-six to six the State Senate has passed the bill to make gambling a felony. The bill now goes to the House, and if the members will act wisely in the matter, it will soon be ready for the Governor's signature.

The Cincinnati, Georgetown and Portmouth railroad was formally opened for passenger traffic last Monday. The officers of the road "excused" to Georgetown and were welcomed with appropriate ceremonies by the overjoyed citizens of that place.

It is said that all things come to him who waits, and Mr. Lovely, the new postmaster at Paris, believes in its truth. Twenty-five years ago Lincoln turned him out of office, and after waiting that length of time, Mr. Lovely returns to the same position he held under Buchanan. —[Editorial Journal.]

We understand that Huntington says he will build the river road this year or never. We would be glad to see it built this year. It would be very nice to slip off to Mayville in the morning and back home in the evening. We understand that there will be no trouble in getting the right of way through Boyd County, —[Aland Republic.]

The appointment of a Revenue Agent for this State still hangs fire. Commissioner Millerhagen is yet recovered from his sickness. Several parties are claiming they have been promised the place and the matter is becoming terribly muddled. Major Stanton still wears his accustomed smile, and remains confident of "knocking the doors."

Correction.

The President of the City Council did not state at the last meeting that the K. C. Railroad owed the city $7,000 for taxes. He stated under the proper order of deferred business that the Kentucky Central Railroad had passed into the hands of a receiver and had been seen in the schedule of liabilities that it owed several thousand dollars for taxes and he did not know when the amount due our city would be paid. In fact the railroad owes the city for 1884 and 1885 $375 for each year with 5 per cent. added, making $750 taxes and $375.50, penalty, or $787.50 in all and a bill for this amount was made out by the President a few weeks ago at the request of the agent and was handed to Mr. Ficklin. Will the Republican and Eagle please correct?

By the death of General W. S. Hancock, the country loses one of her most distinguished military men, and one of her most highly honored citizens. His sickness was brief and his death sudden and unexpected, like that of most of the great men who have passed away in the past six months. Death has indeed cut a wide swath among the distinguished citizens of our country of late. Grant, Vanderbilt, Hendricks and Hancock have all passed to their rest in a few short months. Though now numbered among the dead, Hancock will, as the Louisville Courier-Journal says, live in the hearts of the Southern people as one who, in the hour of their direst distress, was brave enough to be their friend, gentle enough to rule without ruin, and magnanimous enough to recognize that even the vanquished should have the right to be free.

A gentleman, recently calling at a boarding-house, left his umbrella in the hat-rack with a card on which was the following: "Wanted—A strong stick for a forty-pound blow. Will be back in minutes." When he returned the umbrella was gone; but in its place was a scrap of paper bearing the words: "A man who walks five miles an hour, won't be back at all." —[Puck.]

The Real Problem.
(St. Louis Republican.)

The real problem the world over is not how to make times better by increasing product prices but how to lessen what it produces; how to increase its capacity of a consumption up to the capacity of production. It is a wide human problem, for it involves the amelioration of the condition of the millions who would be only too glad to consume more if they had the means of doing so.
